The timing and character of distributions for federal income tax purposes are determined in accordance with income tax regulations, which differ from generally accepted accounting principles (“GAAP”). As such, all or a portion of this distribution may be reportable as a return of capital on your 2025 federal income tax return. The final tax character of distributions declared in 2025 will be determined in January 2026 and reported to you separately from this notice on IRS Form 1099-DIV.

For the purposes of satisfying Section 19(a) reporting obligations, the Fund estimates that 38% of the distribution of Class I shares, 35% of the distribution of Class D shares, 28% of the distribution of Class U and 28% of distribution of Class S shares for the current month is attributable to net investment income when calculated using GAAP and the remaining is attributable to a return of capital. These amounts, calculated in accordance with GAAP, are not intended as a disclosure of the treatment of distributions for federal tax purposes.
